Dear Readers

'...If we teach today as we taught yesterday, we rob our children of tomorrow.'

- John Dewey

When there is a willingness to change, there is hope for progress. It is aptly cited: 'A nation's destiny is being shaped in the classroom'. The teaching-learning in today's scenario needs innovative practices that can make children's education more effective. Open and clear communication is key to developing a healthy, friendly learning atmosphere in a class. There is nothing as challenging as getting students engaged. Today the students are multitasking but lack a long attention span. Making learning student-centric and relating the content to the student's immediate environment is one important aspect along with various activities. A relevant dose of humour at an appropriate time to spice up the environment is highly recommended to let the children get connected again to the content with full concentration. Sometimes ignoring disruptive behaviour is way better than reacting to it or the option is to talk it out with the students involved separately. To enhance the performance of the class, the involvement of students in decision-making by using voting and polling is a great way to show trust while deciding on a certain topic or class assignment. Learning is not just the product of teaching, it is the product of the activity of learners. Education not only imparts knowledge, and skills and inculcates values but is also responsible for building human capital which breeds, drives, and sets technological innovation and economic growth. Rather than looking at education simply as a means of achieving social upliftment, society must view education also as an engine of advancement of society.
