

“Never Let Ego Overpower Your Achievements”

Nimaben Acharya In Exclusive Interview With The School Post Young Reporters Team Comprising of Diya Brahma, Dhaniya Mehta, Anshika Chhabra, Srishti Yadav, Nitya-DELHI PUBLIC SCHOOL, GANDHINAGAR

Nimaben shared her experience of working as a dedicated gynaecologist before being an MLA for 25 years and how she still pursues her passion. The turning point in her life was when her female patients shared their dreadful condition with her and this was the point where she decided to aid them in the best possible way. She considered politics as the best way to reach out to a larger masses.

On being asked about her roles and challenges she addressed that a balance needs to be maintained between the administration as well as public issues. Since there are too many responsibilities, with it comes stress. Hence, it is very important to understand our work and then work to get the best of it. Moreover, important duties bring along a lot of challenges. These hurdles actually provide with opportunities. Nevertheless, the rest is what our work teaches us at its best.

“Never let ego overpower your achievements” she stays grateful towards her family for supporting every decision she took. On the TSP Question for gender equality, she states that it is very significant in every field of work. Men as well as women play equal role in forming a better nation to live in. Though, nowadays women are leading over all the fields. Her remarkable opinion on how Women Empowerment is a catalyst of men support is truly noteworthy.

On being asked about her most memorable day she says “One such historical moment was when the president attended the assembly meeting. He took a session for the assembly members. The competitiveness of women in the field of politics was appreciated. Not only this, even the opposition party appreciated the efforts of women working in this field.”

She had also experienced the infamous non disciplinary incidents from once when she was an MLA. The member representing the opposition threw a microphone towards her which was later telecasted in media for the entire day.

Dr.Nimaben Acharya has proved to be the perfect role model who along with being a dedicated and hard-working speaker, truly portrays the characteristics of a pure hearted and sensitive human being. Her humbleness and devotion towards people and God reveal her strong personality. She seeks inspiration from Swami Vivekananda.

Quoting her experience from college “I was asked to dissect a frog. Being a devotee of Jainism, it was against my principles to dissect the frog. I was a very bold student and without any hesitation I went to the principal who allowed the same. But in my final M.B.B.S. examination, I was instructed to dissect a frog. I stuck to my principles. When the examiner came to me; I told him that he could ask me anything from the prescribed book. When the result came, I had passed with flying colours with distinction grade in the 1st merit list itself. The task which seems to be impossible can also be passed with easiness. The only thing required is to never compromise with our principles and to be mentally strong.”

Lastly, on asking what she wants our generations to strongly look out for, she gave an inspiring message to today's youth that young generations should realise the importance of time management, regulation of emotions especially anger management, social adjustment, honesty, hard work as well as complete dedication towards work in life in order to become successful and contented.
